The Russians are believed to have advanced their proposal in a move to case their isolation. The resumption of the dialogue is not expected in Moscow to wipe out the intermittent name-calling and the resentments accumulated over the past two decades. Nor would it diminish Soviet concern at the way

like the United States playing its "China card" to influence relations with Moscow - they could influence their relations with Washington to the extent that they manage to defrost their relations with Peking. The border negotiations were conducted off and on in Peking for almost a decade until they were broken off. They dealt, with varying degrees of success, with river navigation, border trade and the drawing of the frontier itself. The last is a difficult problem that led to bloody Sino-Soviet clashes in ATHENS - The sweeping elec-tion victory of Andreas Papandreou's Panhellenic Socialist Move-ment has brought Greece to the brink of potentially dramatic polit-ical social and economic change. With final electoral results giv-ing Mr. Papandreou's party 48 per-cent of the vote and an absolute majority of 174 seats in the 300-member parliament, constitutional Socialist Movement officials have admitted that foreign policy issues were a not a major concern to most Greek voters. But the fact that the Socialist Movement polled 10 percent less of the vote in the election to choose the country's 24 delegates to the Council of Europe seems to indicate that not all its member parliament, constitutional processes were set in motion for a supporters agree with Mr. Papan-dreon's plans to break or weaken

Greece's ties with the West. In recent months, furthermore, NEWS ANALYSIS Mr. Papandreou has blurred many of his more radical foreign policy positions. He replaced a promise to pull out of the Common Market smooth transition of power from the defeated New Democracy Parwith a pledge to hold a national referencium on the subject. Coostantioe Caramanlis was expected to give Mr. Papandreou a mandate to

And, apparently because he knows that Mr. Caramanlis, the architect of Greece's European policy, is unlikely to agree to such a vote, he replaced that goal with a promise to renegotiate the terms of Andreas Papandreou, leader of the Panhellenic Socialist Movement, holds his first meeting with Greece's entry into the Common Market or to unilaterally ignore directives he believes to be con-trary to Greece's interests.

In regard to NATO, Mr. Papan-dreou has gradually softened his original policy of removing Greece from the alliance, saying that the only unnegotiable point is that both NATO and the Warsaw Pact get out of Europe.

Determined to have tactical nuclear warheads removed from Greece, the outspoken Socialist leader recently proposed the estab-lishment of a nuclear-free zone in the Balkans.

Mr. Papandreou can now be expected to bring before parliament the agreement through which Greek reintegration in NATO was negotiated last October after a sixvear absence.

He has also promised to delay taking up the question of what to do with the four U.S. military bases until early next year. Al-

'Deported' Squatters Find Home Again in Cape Town

By Caryle Murphy Washington Post Service

CAPE TOWN --- Vakatshiwo Gocina is back in town. And so is his wife. And so are his five children. And so are at least 300 hundred other blacks who were arrested, jailed and "deported" from Cape Town to the independent homeland of Transkei by South African authorities in

With their return, the saga of Cape Town's Nyanga squatters has taken its predicted cyclical course and dem-onstrated the limited deterrent value of the barsh treatment meted out to the squatters in an attempt to stop them from streaming out of their poverty-ridden rural areas into the white-controlled citles.

For more than a month authorities and squatters engaged in a unique sort of struggle in Nyanga. Police tore down the squatters' plastic and corrugated-iron lean-tos as fast as they were put up, leaving in the process about 2,000 men, women and children unprotected against the chilly winter rains.

Today the barren plot where the protracted drama took place looks like an empty stage after the audience has gone. The grass, now brightened by yellow and purple heather, is longer and the spring winds warmer. Rusted oil drums are scattered next to the scars of a fire. The skeleton frame of a child-sized house stands unfinished and sheets of corrugated iron are piled beneath a row of blue gum trees. All around the site, known in Cape Town vernacular as "no-name camp." is a new barbed-wire fence, a catchall for hits of lister and a barrier to would-be squatters. Its gate is padlocked.

But the play has not closed. It is out on circuit. In Transkei's capital of Umtata, about 600 of the deported squatters refused to return to their villages and were put up in local churches. The Transkei army came to the rescue with food.

Some squatters who attempted to return to Cape Town inumediately were stopped by police roadblocks on the histoway. For a few days, roadblocks were also set up in the black townships of Cape Town to catch any "illegal blacks" who had slipped by. The affair strained relations between South Africa and Transkei, the first black reserve or homeland to become independent," a status recognized only by South Africa. Transkei officials resented the squatters' forced move to a place where there are no jobs. Prime Minister George Matanzima called Pretoria a "big bully." "Transkeians are entitled to come and work in the Cape as much as any other racial group because they have contributed to its development," said a Transkei official who did not want to be named.

He defuly set aside for the moment the fact that the government he serves forfeited the right of Transkeian citizens to any claim on South Africa so far as Pretoria is concerned by accepting independence in 1976. Transke-ians are now "foreigners" in the 87 percent of South Africa under white control.

There were high-level between the South African foreign minister and two Transkei Cabinet ministers. South Africa gave Transkei money to help the squatters relocate to their villages. But most of the squatters looked upon their $65 dividend as fare to get back to Cape Town.

They returned by bus, train and plane. Some hitchbiked. In their pockets many carried a letter written on official stationery of the Transkei Ministry of Social Services identifying the bearer as a Nyanga squatter and request-ing that employers "give these people preference when they apply for employment." "That carries no weight here [in Cape Town]," a white woman said. "It's like South Africa giving a paper to someone asking that they be given a job in England."

Mr. Gocini is a hit luckier than most. "I went back to my employer and said, 'Here I am' and he gave me back my job," the 38-year-old factory worker said. "I'm staving with my sister [in her Nyanga home] and my wife is stay-ing with her daddy." he said. His wife returned from Umtata first, "I waited until the oext Sunday," he said. Why Sunday? "It's easier," he said with a grin, "there are less roadblocks."

"Io August, we saw about 900 cases from the Nyanga site," said the director of a volunteer-run advisory office. "It dropped to about 50 in September, but this week it'a picked up like mad." In two days more than 200 persons came for help, she said.

Official government policy is that Cape Town must be kept a "preferential" area for the mixed-race population. This is wby influx control is so rigorously pursued here and why the Nyanga squatters became the focus of government attention. By keeping out families and restricting labor to yearly renewable contracts, the authorities hope to prevent new black residential areas from developing.

This policy overlooks the fact that mixed-race persons are migrating out of Cape Town for the more industrialized Transvaal to take up better-paying jobs. It also flies in the face of the free labor market system that the goveroment claims to favor as a bastion of capitalism.

MOSCOW - President Leonid I. Brezhnev on Monday signaled satisfaction with the selection of Gen, Wojciech Jaruzelski as Poland's new party leader, lauding him as a consistent supporter of Soviet-Polish friendship and urging him to use his "great prestige" to rally Polish Communists against "counterrevolation."

Moscow further displayed its approval of actions taken by Pol-ish Communists at the weekend meeting of the party Central Com-mittee by publishing extensive ex-cerpts from its resolutions, includ-ing the affirmation of the governthen's power to proclaim martial law and proposals for a suspension of the right to strike. Mr. Brezhnev's cordial and personal telegram of congratulations to Gen. Jaruzelski contrasted sharply with the harshness of most recent Soviet references to the Polish government and party. Stan-islaw Kania, whose resignation as first secretary Sunday preceded Gen. Jaruzelski's election, has gone virtually numentioned in the Soviet press for several weeks. President's Message

"Knowing you as a prominent party and state leader of fraternal Poland and as a consistent sup-porter of inviolable friendship between the Polish People's Republic and the Soviet Union, we express confidence that at this crucial historical moment you will use all your great presuge to rally the ranks of the Polish United Workers' [Communist] Party on the ba-sis of the principles of Marxism-Leninism, in the interests of defending the Socialist gains of the Polish working class and all work-ing people of Poland against encroachments by counterrevolution. overcoming the political and eco-nomic crisis of the country and further strengthening the sover-eignty of the Polish state under the leadership of the PUWP," Mr. Brezhnev wrote.

He further pledged that Gen. Jaruzelski's efforts would meet with "understanding and support" from the Soviet Union, a phrase that may imply Soviet readiness to extend more credits and assistance to Poland's wounded economy if the new party leader lives up to Moscow's expectations.

The Kremlin has made no secret in recent months of its frustration. with Mr. Kania for his inaction against Solidarity, especially in light of the militan) positions taken by the independent union at its national congress in Gdansk policies Moscow described as a direct challenge to Communist pow-er in Poland.

Irish Police, Gunmen Trade Shots

DUNDALK, Ireland - Police said Monday that they had exchanged shots with gunmen whom they suspected of being involved in the kidpapping of a millionaire's son.

No one was injured in the incident Sunday night and the gunmen fled across the nearby border into Northern Ireland, police said. The shooting took place about five miles from where Bernard Dunne, 32, son of the head of Ireland's largest supermarket chain, was kidnapped Friday. In Belfast early Monday, police shot to death a 24-year-old man who they said had been in a stolen taxi that crashed through a roadblock. They said he was a member of the Ulster Defense Association, a Protestant paramilitary force.

KARLSRUHE, West Germany — The police have made their first arrest in connection with last month's attack on the U.S. Army's Europe-an commander, the Federal Criminal Office announced Monday. Helga Roos, a 27-year-old Frankfurt student, was arrested Friday on charges of "supporting a terrorist band," the office said.

Miss Roos was suspected of having purchased the tent found near the wooded spot from which terrorists fired a Soviet-made RPG-7 grenade at a car carrying Gen. Frederick J. Kroesen Jr. and his wife.

Spain Autonomy Votes Seen as Test Renaers

SANTIAGO, Spain — More than 6 million people in two of the poor-est parts of Spain vote Tuesday in autonomy polls seen as an important test for the the central government. The votes will be the first indication of opinion since the attempted military coup last February. Politicians fear there could he a high abstention rate in Galicia, which elects its first regional parliament, and Andalusia, which votes in a referendum on autonomy. Analysts said a low turnout would point to disenchantment with the way Premier Leopoldo Calvo Sotelo has handled regional autonomy. Galicia is a stronghold of the ruling Union of the Democratic Center, but local officials say opinion polls show that the Socialists and the conservative Popular Alliance could gain at the expense of the centrists. Meanwhile, a parcel bomh exploded Sunday night in the offices of the Ministry of Culture in Pontevedra, Galicin's provincial capital, causing damage but no injuries.

Papandreou Victory Is Welcomed by Russia

By Dusko Doder

Washington Post Service MOSCOW - The Soviet Umon welcomed the Socialist victory in the Greek elections with a flurry of commentaries Monday voicing hopes that the new government of Andreas Papandreou would make radical changes in Greek foreign policy. One commentary distributed by the press agency Novosti suggested that the new Greek government should take up a Soviet offer for a hilateral agreement under which Greece would ban all nuclear weapons from its territory. The Russians, in exchange, would pledge never to use nuclear weapons against Greece in case of a nuclear confrontation

Tass was more cautious, merely praising Mr. Papandreou's call for the removal of U.S. nuclear weap-ons from the Greek territory. Tass said such a move "would lead to the counter of the second secon the country's exclusion from a pos-sible nuclear conflict."

Tass attributed the impressive Socialist victory to the "positive program" of Mr. Papandreou. He is opposed to Greek participation in NATO and the European Eco-nomic Community and to the U.S. military bases in Greece. But, Tass said, Western reaction to the Socialist victory forecasts "considerable difficulties" in implementing Mr. Papandreou's program. The commentaries indicated,

In a cantiously worded state-ment, a U.S. spokesman said, "We believe a good bilateral relation-ship is in the interests of both Greece and the United States."

The spokesman said that the United States would wait until it saw what the new government was going to do about Greek membership in NATO before making any moves.

The spokesman said, "Greece has been a valued member of NATO since 1952; our bilateral agreements date from that time and these military facilities form an important part of our alliance defense in the eastern Mediterranean. Successive Greek govern-

Turkish forces occupy the north-ern part of Cyprus, and Greek-Cypriot Socialists, sensing renewed support for their cause, hailed the result as a victory for the island.

A government spokesman in Cyprus said that President Spyros Kyprianou plans to fly to Athens for talks on Friday.

There was no official reaction from Turkish-Cypriot leader Rauf Denktas. But he said before the election that victory for Mr. Pa-pandreou would make the Cyprus problem more difficult.

And in Turkey itself, the reac-tion was cautious. Mr. Papandreou peppered his campaign with anti-Turkish statements.

Turkish Statements. Turkish Foreign Ministry sources as said the election result could mean some delay to the solution of bilateral disputes. But a Greek withdrawal from NATO's military wing or any renegotiation of its membership of the EEC could bring Turkey more support from its Western allies and trading partners, they felt.

Portugal's Socialist Party tempered its congratulations with a prediction that the Greek Socialists, once in power, would proba-hly shy away from fulfilling some of their most radical election promises.

France's Socialist government seen by many leftist commentators as a sign of the same change of po-litical climate in Western Europe that swept Mr. Papandreou to power, sent its congratulations Sunday night.

The Italian Communist Party daily newspaper, L'Unità said: "Now the left has also won in Greece. The wind of renewal and hope that changed French politics a few months ago has brought about a corresponding change in a Mediterranean country."

Willy Brandt, leader of the West German Social Democratic Party, sent Mr. Papandreou a message of congranulations urging close ties between Greece and its European neighbours Spain's Socialist opposition par-ty, which opposes Spanish NATO entry, also welcomed the Greek outcome.

Washington Post Service JERUSALEM — Following a second night of disturbances over the playing of works by Wagner, the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra announced Monday that it will continue to attempt to present mu-sic by the 19th-century German composer, whose works are strongly identified with the Third Reich. The issue has become a major controversy in Israel, although concertgoers who oppose the play-ing of Wagner remain a distinct

Mr. Haig's action reawakened feelings in the White House that the secretary of state is not willing to subordinate himself to the interests of the Reagan team.

A Hand of Compassion

The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees has for decades done the heroic and sorrowful work of caring for the millions - the tens of millions - of people around the world who continue to be forced to flee their homelands. It won its first Nobel Peace Prize for tending to the human debris of World War II in Europe, and it has now won its second for tending to the victims of the political violence that has since become endemic elsewhere. Upheaval seems a permanent fixture of contemporary international life. Desperate people are washed across national frontiers like so much soapy water. So it has become necessary to institutionalize a humanitarian response, in the High Commission, and to keep up its public standing, its authority to deal with sovereign governments and its morale by Nobel Prizes.

No single nation can say it has done everything it can to care adequately for the estimated 12 million to 14 million people classified as refugees today, or to prevent the generation of refugees, past and future. As impolitic as it may be for the Nobel Committee to say so, however, the fact is that the Soviet Union has a special record. Its policies and its weapons have had a very large part in generating the principal current refugee flows, from Indochina, Ethiopia and Afghanistan, not to speak of Cuba, and it utterly refuses to accept any responsibility for these results. No country today is doing more than the Soviet Union to mock the concept of an international "community" — the very con-cept that the Office of the High Commissionet, and the several hundred voluntary agencies that work closely with it, have done so much to strengthen.

The United States has long been a bulwark of the work and purpose of the UN commission. The Reagan administration is sustaining this tradition. It is providing important funds, and with other governments it is trying to ensure that the commission gets a better grip on the management problems that have arisen in the wake of necessarily rapid recent budget expansion. This should help make the commission an even more effective hand of compassion extended to some of the most wretched people in the world. THE WASHINGTON POST.

GALAPAGOS ISLANDS - Charles Darwin was only 26 years old when he visited the Galapages in 1835. His careful eye and his endless yet humble curiosity had already provided a great range of evidence on the extraordinary and subtle variety of life.

But it was here, on this cluster of islands 600 miles west of South America, that he was struck by the purposeful pattern in the relation of organisms to their environment.

Most of the islands are volcanic. All plants and creatures had to come from afar, brought by winds and currents. There is considerable difference in the land. Some islands have a reddish soil. Some are arid: one has a dazzling while cover of what looks like sand but is all crushed shells. Although the islands are only a few miles apart, the varied conditions support distinctly varied types of creatures, which are undisturbed by man.

For Darwin, the great revelation was the clear sign they provided of the unity of life. The 13 different types of finches and the variations in the

His conclusion changed the history of life sciences. Nothing has been discovered since to challenge Darwin's intuition, and an immense body of new midence has been found to validate it. So it is evidence has been found to validate it. So it is curious to note in the late 20th century, when men have walked on the moon, that an insistent new surge of belief in "creationism" is reviving the Victorian controversy about man's origin. The current dispute is more sophisticated than the mythic frenzy of the Tennessee "Monkey Tri-al" of the 1920s, when teaching evolution was characted to be a criminal act to be presided by charged to be a criminal act to be punished by God-fearing society. Now "creationists" argue that Darwin's theory should be tanght as an equal alternative to the biblical story of Genesis, in which God created everything separately. The states of Louisiana and Arkansas have passed laws requiring schools to give "equal time" and, in effect, equal credence to the two explanations of physical existence. The "creationists" are agitat-ing for similar laws in many other states.

The movement causes concern among scientists of all kinds. They see it, correctly I think, as an attempt to reject the disciplined quest for variable knowledge. There is a dangerous attitude about, based on fear, that man may already know more than is good for him. Yet everything around us screams that we know far too little to know what is good for us.

Isaac Asimov recently made an eloquent plea to recognize that anti-science will menace America's capacity to deal with a changing, ever more diffi-cult world. Jean Dausset of France, the winner of the Nobel Prize in medicine, has gone further to point out that awareness of biology and evolution has become essential to survival of mankind itself. "Modern man," Dausset writes, "already nu-merous and soon too numerous on his little earth, can no longer be confident of nature's generosity. By his science, by his discoveries, he has transgressed the laws of nature. He can manipu-late his life, his progeny ... He must be aware of this power but also of the risks it brings, and so of his responsibilities."

Only by learning more - partly through scienific techniques to grow more food and produce more and less-harmful energy; partly through moral inderstanding of interdependence that bi-ology and ecology help provide — can these re-constituities to an sponsibilities be met.

Jean Dausset notes that it "isn't enough to be aware of the drama." Alone, innuition of impend-ing disaster can lead to the wish to revert to some legendary golden age of ignorance, the common theme of fundamentalists of all religions. "Each individual," he says, "must know that scientific solutions exist, and understand the broad outlines." Failure to teach what has been learned, the

On Fear and Its Dangers:

OS ANGELES - During the last 10 years, a battle has been raging over the very foundation of freedom upon which the U.S. government is based. Questions about the validity of the constitutional form of government are raised daily. Is the U.S. Constitution really as relevant today as it was in 1776, or has it run its course and lost its effectiveness?

I believe that it is relevant, but I recognize that it is under greater attack today than ever before. Why? Because Americans are afraid. Regardless of their station in life, religion or politics, Ameri-cans fear for the safety of them-selves and their possessions, and pray for economic stability. Fear is a debilitating emotion, and sorely one of the most painful. Simply to be freed from that pain becomes a primary concern, so one is willing to try anything, give up anything just to feel bet-ter. A natural human reaction? But history shows that it is a very dangerous one. In 1933, one of the most literate, intelligent nations on Earth found itself in the midst of chaos — riots, rampant crime, soaring inflation, Communist infiltration and economic disaster - and was willing to follow a man who advocated a law-and-order-oriented society to cure the pain the people felt in their lives. That man did what he promised to do hut his law and order or to do, but his law-and-order-oriented society required a police state. The goal was achieved, but at tremendous cost: Adolf Hitler and Germany were both destroyed.

That type of situation not only can happen to Americans, it is happening, and has been for the past seven or eight years. Basic lears are triggering various forms of restrictive legislation such as mandatory sentencing in every legislature in every state in the country and in Congress. This phenomenon is nothing more than an attempt to apply a sim-ple solution to a very complex problem.

When simple solutions fail - and they have, as a matter of fact - the result is a loss of the people's confidence in their government, and ultimately a call to disregard the old and try something oew, if only for the sake of feeling more secure. Whenever the people lose confidence in their government, their institu-tions and their leaders, can a loss of confidence in themselves be that far in the future? It may be that Pogo was right: "We have met the enemy, and he is us."

The French Were There

To Americans it frequently seems that their old friends the French can be exceedingly exasperating and that the alliance has rougher edges than necessary. That is all true, but when these thoughts occur it is useful to recall an earlier moment in that long friendship. When the British surrendered at Yorktown 200 years ago yesterday, it was because a fleet of 37 French ships of the line had seized control of the Chesapeake and cut off any hope of relief.

In the late summer of 1781, Gen. Cornwallis and his British troops were in well-fortified positions on that long peninsu-la, with their backs to the sea. They were bored, but hardly worried. Their chief complaint was that they were stuck in a southern swamp hundreds of miles from the center of the action. In New York, the British commander, Gen. Clinton, was preparing for the combined British and French attack on the city that both sides expected to be the decisive battle of the war. Then the allies suddenly changed their strategy.

In early September, a British admiral took his ships down toward Virginia looking for a French squadron, and realized that Adm. de Grasse's main fleet had suddenly appeared from the West Indies. They fought a sharp but inconclusive battle off the Chesapeake Capes, and the British, having suffered a good deal of damage, fell back to New York. Meanwhile, the American Army under Gen. Washington and the French under Count de Rochambeau had abandoned New York and were cutting rapidly southward.

As the French marched through Philadelphia, then the capital, Count de Rochambeau ordered his men "to salute Congress as a crowned head, and the president as the first prince of the blood." A historian observes that the courtesy must have greatly astonished the congressmen watching from the State House, for they rarely got much respect from their own troops.

Reaching Yorktown, the allies began pressing Gen. Cornwallis back and on Oct. 9, after days of artillery fire, he surrendered. It was a political triumph for the Americans, ending the Revolution, but in military terms it was mainly a French victory. Without de Grasse's ships just over the horizon, the British would soon have relieved Gen. Cornwallis by sea from New York, and Yosktown would have been one more incident in a long war that might conceivably have come to a different ending.

French warships have returned to the Chesapeake for the celebration of the anniversary, and they are very welcome. That is what anniversaries are for - to remind you how the world was changed, and who was there.

Rogue Elephants at Large

If the Central Intelligence Agency can punish former agents who break its rules against disclosing secrets learned on the job, why can't it do something about former spics who train foreign terrorists? The question becomes more compelling with each revelation about the exploits of Edwin Wilson and Frank Terpil. These former agents, currently fugitives from gunrunning charges, have exploited their service-connected skills and credentials in the cause of terrorists like Idi Amin and Colonel Qadhafi.

Wilson and Terpil have become central figures of continued reports about the unauthorized transfer overseas of America's advanced technology, weapons and expertise. For all their resemblance to fictional spy storics, these tales depict an alarming lack of control over lawless action, sometimes taken in the nation's name. Fortunately, Congress and some parts of the executive branch are beginning to show concern.

The reaction was swift enough three years ago when Frank Snepp, a CIA official at the end of the Vietnam war, published a book about his experiences without clearing the manuscript. The Justice Department such him for every cent the book earned, and the Supreme Court npheld this method of holding former agents to their oaths of secrecy.

No such contract clause seems to prevent the CIA's alumni from exploiting their knowledge to recruit Green Berets to train guerrillas in Libya, or from enlisting government contractors in their schemes. Criminal laws prohibit sucaking military equipment and technological expertise out of the country, but there seem to have been no safeguards preventing people from being gulled into thinking the government secretly approved such activity.

ples of the "retired" hired gun. Yet they are undeniably a product of their professional world, exploiting what it teaches about covert operations and disguised affiliations. Business firms and government officials are said to have been led - or willing to be misled - into believing that they were still on official business. And there appears to have been no way for any suspicious person to check on them.

It is one thing to countenance undercover ported CIA activity that it opposes?

Writing rules that curb the Wilsons and Terpils may prove more difficult than drafting censorship contracts. It may also be far less appealing to an administration that wants in fact to lift the restraints on intelligence operations. But if government fails to prevent such freewheeling sabotage of its foreign policy and to deny such operatives their connections, the world can only conclude that they acted with official sanction.

CONSTANTINOPLE - Of late, the world has been informed through the newspapers that the health of Abdul Hamid, Sultan of Turkey, is in a most precarious state. The reports went so far as to say that His Imperial Majesty's days were numbered and that to count the months the Padishah had to live was to deal in very small figures. The papers had even be-gun to count Abdul Hamid as doomed, and therefore a negligible quantity. But Abdul Hamid, now 64, is an exceedingly well man, and what is more, never felt better in his life than he does now. the obstacles in the path of the Middle East peace process now that Anwar Sadat is gone.

· One is that the serious trouble starts on April 26, when Israel is due to evacuate the last third of Sinai. The new Mubarak government, having meanwhile stood firm on Palestinian autonomy proposals that Israel finds unacceptable, will then put relations with Israel on a minimal, cool, formal basis, in an effort to assuage discontent at home and to buy Egypt's return to the Arab fold. This will leave Israelis in a black mood feeling that they have sur-rendered territory and a security buffer for an empty peace. It will cordle even further their tasts for compromise in dealing with the Palastinians Palestimans.

That is what the optimists expect

• The pessimists feel that the scrious trouble will start well be-fore April 26: The Begin govern-ment, anticipating the above scenario, will have great difficulty completing the Sinai withdrawal completing the Sinai withdrawal without being much more sure of President Mubarak than is now the case. Sort of test of Mubarak — say, a tremendous whack at PLO forces in Lebanon. If, despite it, Mu-barak stays on the normalization track, the Israelis will complete their withdrawal, and if he gets off, the Israelis will not. In either case, the Egyptians will have no incen-tive to satisfy Menachem Begin on the Palestinian issue, since to do so would block Mubarak's chances of domestic consensus and Arab company.

Political

For what it's worth, I find myself among the pessimists. Israel has an immense national investment, and Begin an immense personal one, in consummating the 1sraeli-Egyptian peace treaty. But a case can be made that if consummation is to be incomplete, better that it happen before all the territory has been lost - if it can be portrayed as Egypt's fault. Egypt and Mubarak also have large investments in the treaty, but

WASHINGTON - There are not of the same gravity. After com-two schools of thought on pletion of Israeli withdrawal - if may have a certain appeal.

In a word, it is foolish for the Reagan administration to rely just on demonstrations of 'military reach and readiness to bring about a post-Sadat calm in the Middle East. The crisis there has a military dimension but is primarily political and centers on the Palestinians That April 26 Sinai desdline was hanging out there anyway, and it was going to compel certain choic-es on the Palestinian question no matter who was ruling in Cairo.

The minimal American require-ment is to get that planned multinational peace force out into Sinai quickly to ensure that, no matter what the state of Israeli-Egyptian political relations, military instability does not return to that front. The United States accepted such an obligation at Camp David.

Decision

After that, the administration had better get cracking and figure out how to keep some sort of negotiating process alive. Camp David has the virtue of existing, but Be-gin has cast a dark shadow over its future by his parched approach so far to the autonomy talks and by his expansive policy of Jewish set-tlement in the West Bank.

A number of Americans think it is wrong to give up on Camp Da-vid without the Reagan administration first making its own big push to make it pay off further. The Europeans favor their own spproach to the PLO. The wider dip-lomatic community's clear favorite seems to be the Saudi eight-point plan, a wispy but suggestive out-line that would, its partisans argue, sustain the large amount of additional work needed to make it into a worthy diplomatic vehicle. But the prime need is not the right plan. It is, quite simply, for the friends of the two principa is to undertake to impose a fair and secure settlement, the United States for the Israelis and mainly the Saudis for the Palestinians. For Ronald Reagan this will take a difficult combination of firmness and assurance, including, perhaps an offer of a concrete security guarantee. It entails a momentous political decision, and at this point he does not appear even close to considering it.

If he is not impressed by the argument that American interests may otherwise suffer, he might consider the openings that a con-decision offers to Moscow. It might also make a difference to Ronald Reagan, considering that he is Ronald Reagan, that by going about it the right way he could do a great service to Israel, a nation he cares about deeply. 01981, The Washington Post.

The impression of West German nationalism and anti-Americanism given in your report (IHT, Oct. 12) on the Bonn peace demonstration is misleading. First, the peace movement is not nationalistic. The point is that NATO has made a bad decision. After a war our country would be a desert, nothing but a desert — even after a conventional war.

Second, the movement is not anti-American. It opses the defense policy of the present American and West German governments. Many people think that, as the United States is a mocracy and the Soviet Union a dictatorship, only the Soviet Union can be a threat to peace. This is an ment of dreamers.

NATO and Warsaw Pact defense concepts are based on worst case scenarios. The number and accuracy of U.S. nuclear missiles qualify them as firststrike weapons. This is a fact, and a disturbing one, whatever may be said of American intentions.

The deployment of so-called theater weapons in Europe changes the balance of power, and is not an answer to the Soviet SS-20 — which most members of the peace movement also oppose. (But we can't change the decisions of the Warsaw Pact.) Now, for the first time in the history of the arms race, one superpower will be able to cause strategic damage to the other with a warning time of only a few minutes.

The NATO rearmament decision causes a danger-ous speedup of the arms race and a further destabil-ization of the already precatious military situation. Every American and every German concerned about the security of his country should protest against it. Ibbenbüren, West Germany. MARTIN BEYER.

Once again Columbus Day has come and gone, bringing that annual Loch Ness monster among his-torical enigmes: Who discovered America? Meaning, of course, someone other than the indigenous popula-tion. Surely it is about time someone insisted on a clearer definition of "discovery." The only significant meaning of that word, when it comes to America, is obviously the contact by Europeans that began the process of exploration and colonization which ultiately led to the America we know today.

Although Vikings, St. Brendan and his Irish monks, and even perhaps the Chinese may have stumbled upon her shores unwittingly. ### Pigeon at La Pyramide

In your Oct. 10-11 issue you have an article by Patricia Wells entitled "La Pyramide: A Monument in Name Only." Considering how little time it took to write such an article, compared with the two life-times it took to build up a restaurant such as La Pyramide, Miss Wells' harsh judgment is unfair. In my personal opinion, it is also untrue. That the writer's pigeon looked "pathetic" is a point of view, but that it was saturated with chlorine bleach is just unbelievable, and the assertion makes this article a silly mockery. A mishap (for which the restaurant was not at fault) concerning the wine is described in such detail as to make the greatest maître sommelier, Louis Tho-masi, who is an authority and a wonderful and hum-ble person, look ridiculous to an unknowing reader. As for the marjolaine chocolate cake, I found it excel-lent when I ate at La Pyramide recently.

I find the article disgraceful, My friends, my colleagues and I know that it gives a totally wrong im-pression of a restaurant that is still one of the best in the world. Zurich

TOKYO - Touring the Far East last week, Yasser Arafat woo im-pressive diplomatic gains for the Palestine Liberation Organization. Before visiting Japan, he was warmly received in Peking, Pyon-gyang and Hanoi. The Chinese news agency called oo the United States to press Israel to make concessions toward bringing the Palestinians into a peace settlement in the Middle East. "Now it is up to Israel to make the next move," the agency said.

In Tokyo, Mr. Arafat met Premier Zenko Suzuki of Japan, the first head of a major non-Communist government to receive him. The substance of their talk is not known and may not matter greatly, but afterward, Japanese diplomats tied themselves in knots ex-pressing support for the PLO and allegiance to Washington, all in one gesture. Japanese officials said they were in touch with the United States and would pass on what they learned from Mr. Arafat. This was a polite Japanese way of repeating Peking's message.

Mr. Arafat was invited by the Japan-Palestine Friendship League, an obscure parliamentary group, but, in fact, the visit was organized behind the scenes by the overnment

Japan recoiled from the PLO as an ally of the Japanese Sekigun, or Red Army, terrorists who operated out of Beirut. The group pulled off a spectacular plane hijacking in 1977, obtaining a $6-million Japanese government ransom and release of six members and sympathizers from Tokyo jails. "By the end of the 1979 field season," wrote Dr. Harvey Weiss of Yale in a report just published, "we had managed to expose portions of two large temples, each magnificently decorated with facades of mud-brick columns, and in one case columns intricately braided in a manner known from few previously excavated sites."

High Expectations

Beneath these ruins lay the remains of a city enclosed in more than two miles of mud-brick walls Syria. 50 feet high and at least 60 feet thick, walls so huge that an army

So far, excavation of the deeper layers has been only exploratory, It is boped that full excavation will produce a harvest of artifacts and cuneiform records. Below the level attrihuted to Shamshi-Adad is one of pottery in a previously unknown style. It is called Leilan ware for the present name of the site. It seems to have appeared in about 2400 B.C., when the walled city was built.

Further below is a layer of pottery associated with an early stage at the fabled city of Nineveh (known as Ninevite V) whose chro-nological position, until now, had been uncertain. Artifacts from the so-called Uruk Period of 3500 B.C. have been identified as well as those, deeper, from the Ubaid Pe-riod of 5000 B.C. The earliest known cunciform writing dates from 3000 B.C.

Indians Discovered the Joys of Abalone Long Before It Became a Symbol of Protest

WHEN demonstrators protest-ing the building of a nuclear plant in Diablo Canyon in California did so under the name of the Abalone Alliance, they miscast slightly the role of this agreeably flavored aminal. It is true that these mollusks were wiped out in the Diablo Cove area when preliminary work started, but the abalone was not then demonstrating incompatibility with nuclear power: the plant had not even been built. The abalone's waters had been polluted by the accidental discharge into the sea of an abnormal amount of ordinary construction wastes. The result would have been the same if the future building had been planned as a shoe factory or a huxury hotel. It happened to be a nuclear plant, so the abalone has now become a symbol of resistance to the development of ouclear power.

The population of the abalone among prehistoric Indians is at-tested by a kitchen midden found on Santa Catalina island and which has been dated at 3,500 to 4.000 B.C. Twenty-two different species of shellfish have been identified there, but the overwhelming majority are abalones and mussels. In the lowest, and bence oldest, levels, abalone shells outnumber mussel shells 4 to 1; in the upper levels this proportion is exactly re-versed. Because of that reserve, his clothes have often been dismissed in the past as demure, if oot down-right stuffy. But not this time. In the middle of the fashion ready-to-wear week here. Givenchy, whose collection was wildly applauded, demonstrated Monday that a woman can be young, with it, even sexy, and still stay elegant. No kinkiness here and no shadow of the milleting citizer as in more work the guillotine either, as in many of the weekend's collections. From the zebra-printed swimsuits (elegant too with their little capes or mini-skirts) to the finale, with some of the best evening gowns in Paris, Givenchy's clothes were pure and perfect.

Lenner Silbonette

The most important news is that gentlemanly Givenchy has endorsed not only a short but a very short look. As in the excellent Chloé collection Sunday, the short flared culottes, which look like bttle skirts, are emerging as one of the most important looks out of Paris. But while at Chloc's, they are made of crèpe de Chine which gives them a full, flippant swirl, at Givenchy's they tend to be more constructed, with all kinds of bitle darts around the waist.

Easy to wear and casy to sell, the comfortable, and easy to sell, the comfortable, mostly silk, chemises are now cropped well above the knee. At Ungaro, where they were finished with a hem ruffle, they looked like so many butterflies. At Givenchy, where the prettiest was of plaid taffeta, they are cut like painters' smocks, with crisp white collars and cuffs and striking black ascots. Givenchy's evening dresses ting them on a curve, like upgraded, fluffy boxer shorts. For evening, the bloomers became fullning, the bloomers became full-fledged taffeta Chinese lanterns, puffed all the way around and worn with strapless tops. Steaks and Stews

A very special example of this sort of dish is described in "Lang's Compendium of Culinary Non-sense and Trivia," by the Hungari-an-American food authority George Lang. Lang says abalone stews should cook at least 12 hours. It is a Chinese creation called Buddha Jumped Over the Fence. (It has several other names, and several explanations for them, but Lang is most enchanted by this one, and so am I). According to legend, a family which lived next door to Buddha hit upon the idea of combining "the finest foodsunfs the earth, the sky, and the occars could new idea and user clock could provide and very slowly steamed it for days in their garden." The cooking odors were so maddeningly delicious that Bud-dha jumped over the fence and joined the feast. One of the ingred-

Only the Geobankers have instant voice communication linking 7 foreign exchange cities-simultaneously.

Speed is absolutely vital in getting you the most favorable rate available when you buy or sell foreign currency. That's why the Geobankers of Manufacturers Hanover have developed a unique communications system that outspeeds both the telephone and telex.

The system allows a seven-way conversation between New York, London, Pans, Frankfurt, Zurich, Brussels and Milan.

Now our foreign exchange trading professionals in all seven cities can tell each other instantly, at any given moment, the local asking and offering prices in any major currency. Not only that, but they can also flash up-to-the-minute news of local developments affecting their own currency.

We save time. You save money.

Good news always travels fast.

By passing your trading interest to all seven cities simultaneously, we are often able to get you a rate that's better in one place than the others-particularly on trades with broken matunity dates. When Frankfurt quotes a rate on marks, for instance, London may call out a better price-and New York may jump in with a better one still.

Also helping to bring about the best transaction possible is the fact that each member of our trading staff specializes in one currency while trading in all.

No numbers to dial. no keyboards to punch.

The Manufacturers Hanover voice network is a direct line, constantly open, linking seven major foreign exchange markets. To hold an inter-country conference call, our traders simply speak into a voice-activated, desktop microphonerelaying spot and forward quotes and fastbreaking news affecting the market.

Instant, transatlantic voice communications also benefit subscribers to the Manufacturers Hanover Foreign Exchange Advisory Service. Because we are able to pass along timely, valuable insights into constantly changing market activity.

A global trading room to make every second count.

No other foreign exchange bank has anything like the Manufacturers Hanover voice network. It's another example of what makes us a leading factor in currency transactions. In fact, our average daily trading volume has tripled in just two years.

It's another example of Geobanking. as well-the way of worldwide banking at Manufacturers Hanover, a major (I.S. bank with over $50 billion in assets.

Put the total global commitment of Manufacturers Hanover to work for you. Contact a Geobanker today, and let us demonstrate our professionalism in foreign exchange.

federal government deficit contin-ued to grow strongly in September, and warned that continuing infla-ARY tionary pressures and fluctuations in international interest rates mean the shifts in monetary policy must be used cantiously, despate a somewhat relaxed position in the country's foreign trade and balance of payments.

Meanwhile, Finance Minister - 1 Hans Matthöfer said Monday that the federal borrowing will probably exceed the government's target of a net 26.5 billion DM for 1982. The Bundesbank said total gross investment, in fixed assets and inwentories, fell in the first six months to 95.5 billion Deutsche marks, 6.5 to 7 billion DM below the year ago level, it said, noting that a relatively sharp decline in investment had been feared in some financial circles.

External Financing

While first half 1981 investment in fixed assets grew 3.5 percent from the 1980 period to 90 billion DM, investment in inventories fell to 5 billion DM from 15 billion DM, the central bank said.

Companies also relied far more heavily on external financing as opposed to internally generated funds, with financing abroad al-most doubling to 26.1 billion DM. while financing within West Ger-many was little changed at 20 billion DM

The ability of companies to finance their own investment was hampered by revenues falling more sharply than expenditure and the payments. Companies internal re-sources fell 7.8 percent from the 1980 period to 76.6 billion DM, the 2 percent forecast earlier.

Britain Moves to Denationalize Energy

and way

New York Times Service LONDON - The British government on Monday announced expanded plans to reduce the role of state-owned companies in the energy business, in keeping with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's conservative economic philosophy. The most important new development was a decision to break the monopoly of the British Gas Corp. in the supply of natural gas, a deci-sion which apparently stemmed from recent difficulties in negotiating a North Sea gas pipeline plan with private companies. In addition, the government re-iterated that it would sell a 51-percent interest in the exploration and production arms of the British National Oil Co., plans that had appeared stalled. The sale of a vanety of energy properties is expect-ed to bring billions of pounds into the British Treasury. The announcement was considered an important reaffirmation of Mrs. Thatcher's intentions. Although the government never publicly retreated on its plans to increase the private share of the energy sector, close observers had come to detect signs of cold feet at the Treasury over the prospect of selling off the government's most profitable assets.

Nigel Lawson, the newly-appointed energy secretary, told the House of Commons on its first day back in session after the summer recess that the package was "with-out doubt, the biggest program of privatization ever to come before Parliament," contending that the measures would bring "long overdue competition, where it matters most."

All the Gas

At the moment, British Gas, which is wholly-owned by the government, delivers and markets all of Britain's natural gas. A month ago, plans for a North Sea gas pip-line were dropped when the oil companies and British Gas could oot agree oo the price to be paid for the supplies.

"The British Gas monopoly was the key factor in the whole prob-lem," said Peter Lilley, a partner at W. Greenwell & Co., a Londoo stock brokerage firm. "It enabled the nationalized corporation to get involved where it ought oot get involved.

Mr. Lilley contended that de-spite being profitable, the compa-ny is highly inefficient. Last year, average pay per employee rose 31 percent

"These outdated privileges have acted as a serious disincentive to the exploration and development of gas supplies on the U.K. conti-nental shelf, with the result that

The package is likely to be a hot political issue this fall, as the required legislatioo is taken up. With a comfortable majority behind Mrs. Thatcher, passage is considered virtually certain.

For the Social Democrats, David Owen termed Mr. Lawson's statement "purely party political dogma." Peter Hardy, a Labor MP, called the plan a "sweeping betrayal of the national interest.

Mr. Reagan's first public recognitioo that a recession may already have started further fueled the decline, analysts said.

Michael Metz of Oppenheimer and Co. said, however, that stock prices will probably not move much lower at this point but rather trade in a narrow range until investors receive further indications on the direction of the economy and interest rates. In company news, Amcoo said it had purchased another 759,200 shares of Newmont Mining at $64 each from financial institutions outside of the United States. The Consolidated Gold Fields unit said it oow holds 2,960,100 shares, or securities dealers, and managers of institutional funds have been using our T-bill* contract to offset interest rate risk tied to short-term cash market positions. The addition of a CD futures contract to the IMM's existing T-bill contract has created a futures market interrelationship that mirrors the cash market, thus allowing professionals to directly hedge cash market risk with a new degree of flexibility. This flexibility and interplay between markets has created, on the IMM, the most liquid CD contract. This assures the best prices and fastest order filling.

The International Monetary Market gave the professionals short-term liquidity. Now we've added flexibility.

For years banks, government | to enter a market. In short-term | next to the T-bill pit. Only the futures this is available only through the International Monetary Market. Not only is the IMM T-bill contract the only successful short-term contract in the world. trading over $20 billion a day, the new CD contract is becoming an industry standard.

Debt, Deficits Seen to Slow Latin Growth

By Barbara Crossence New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - The economics of Latin America, emerging from a decade of substantial growth, are beginning to see their gains croded by large trade deficits and mushrooming foreign debts, according to a report published

Monday. The 1980 report on Economic and Social Progress in Latin Amer-ica, prepared by the Washingtonbased Inter-American Development Bank, suggests that the nations of Central and South America will be increasingly reliant on international lending institutions and economic aid programs.

This conclusion comes at a time when the Reagan administration has been showing little enthusiasm for growth in the work of international development banks, and has indicated a preference in its own foreign aid legislation for countries where U.S. security interests are thought to be best served.

The report portrays a region that has become a victim of an in-ternational trade slowdown and nther economic forces outside its control, and appears, coincidental-ly, just before the meeting in Cancun, Mexico, this week on the economic needs of the Third World. The report on the Latin economics makes these points:

 Though the Latin American economies have expanded at a much more rapid rate than those of the industrialized nations over the last two decades, the gap in per capita product between the Latin American and the industrialized nations - the gross national product in relation to the size of the population - has widened.

· Manufacturing growth has dropped from 7.2 percent in 1979 to 4.6 percent in 1980, a lower figure than all but two of those recorded in the 1970s. Brazil, Mexico and Argentina continue to account for the largest share of manufac-= Fax i turing output.

AP-Dow Jones LONDON - The Bank of England last month nudged interest rates higher to stop the pound's slide, despite the British government's avowal of a hands-off approach to exchange markets.

Not to bave acted, said Gordon Richardson, the central bank governor, "would have risked provoking a quite unacceptable degree of depreciauon" of the pound that would have worsened British inflation.

The rate rise succeeded in moving the pound up to about $1.90 from $1.77 before the move. The pound has since fallen back to about $1.83. But the move also signaled that "the government has abandoned any pretense it may have had that it didn't care about the exchange rate," said David Ashby, chief economist at Grindlays Bank

Wider Implication

Although there may not be an exact target, he said, the central bank probably has a desired band based on a weighted average of the value of the pound against the currencies of Britain's major trading partners.

Analysts said Britain's apparent willingness to keep the pound in a target range means the gov ermment has taken an important step toward formally joining the European Monetary System. Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher may make the move as a pro-European gesture during Britian's six-month chairmanship of the EEC council, which ends Dec. 31, analysts suggested. Accord-ing to Mr. Ashby, it is "quite likely that Britain will join before the end of the year." Roger Nightingale, an economist at the broker-

In the past, the government did not appear to be interested in the pound's trading level and in-stead put its emphasis on hitting money supply targets. But that is harder to do now, analysis

Impact of Strike

A lengthy civil service dispute has badly distort-ed money supply figures, which may persist for months. Also, money supply definitions will be changed next month, making direct comparisons impossible.

And, because a weaker pound would make it tougher to curb inflation - the Conservative government's priority - Britain has had to bolster the currency.

Analysts agree that the crucial influence on the yound in coming months will be the trend of U.S. interest rates

If U.S. rates rise. David Morrison, an eonomist at the London stockbroker Simon & Coates, pre-dicted the pound may ease to between $1.75 and $1.80 by the end of the year. But after that, he said, the U.S. pressure should diminish and the pound should slowly recover to more than $2 during 1982.

What worries Mr. Nightingale is that the gov

PARIS - Foreign shareholders of French banks and corporations targeted for nationalization gener ally accept France's plans for ownership of the property on its own soil, but what some are now contesting is the government's right to take over the foreign subsidiaries and assets of the companies.

'in many European countries particularly, the courts have never recognized the right of a foreign government to nationalize proper-ty under their jurisdiction," said Jean Loyrette, a partner in the Par-is law firm of Gide Loyrette & Nouel, which has just completed a major study of the international legal implications of the government's nationalization program.

In many countries the courts may refuse to let the French govcrament take control of local subsidiaries belonging to companies it nationalizes against their share-holders' will, even when an indemnity has been paid, said Jean Rey, a former president of the EEC Commission

If the French government fails to improve its compensation offer and limit nationalization to the bank's French assets, Mr. Rey's associatinn of Belgian, German, Swiss and British shareholders plans to ask the courts in Belgium, Luxembourg, Switzerland and other countries to award ownership of Paribas' foreign assets to its former shareholders

Congressional Plan to Aid S&Ls Gets Regan's Backing

WASHINGTON - Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan on Monday backed congressional proposals to remove many regulations on savings and loan associations in what Le said was an effort to "literally save the industry."

But Mr. Regan said President Reagan's administration would rather the Congress wait to see how well struggling thrift institu-tions fare with less restrictions be-fore allowing them in go into the mutual fund business.

Appearing before the Senate Banking Committee, Mr. Regan predicted that savings and loans institutions will remain primarily in the housing warket because of their long experience there and the tax advantage that it offers. "I don't think they'll turn their backs on the [housing] industry," he told Sen. William Proxime, Democrat of Wisconsin. "I think the major activity of the thrifts will be in the housing area." Committee Chairman Jake

Garn, Republican from Utah, expressed concern over the future role of S&Ls in providing home loans, but added that unless Congress gave the thrifts broader investment powers, "I see no savings and loan industry left -- literally."

"I think what you're trying to do is literally save the industry," he testified. "The severity of the in-dustry's difficulties in 1981 should have convinced everyone that the governmental restrictions on its business need to be removed."

Savings and loan associations, whose basic function has been to use money from savers to make long-term housing mortgages, have been hit particularly hard by inflation and high interest rates.

Recently, S&Ls have been given additional powers to offer interestbearing checking accounts and provide consumer loans for household, family and personal pur-poses. But industry spokesmen contend they need even broader powers to help them compete bet-ter during volatile economic conditions

Snow's novels the scientist are usually heroic — magnami- nous rationalists almost to a man This in contrast to the rest of us, will whom his patience seemed to shorter as he grew older. His last novel "A Coat of Varnish," is almost unre lievedly pessimistic. As a mediator between these two worlds — the hopeful and rations world of science and the bleak world of fallen man — he was, however un surpassed. It is perhaps a fact of som encouragement that his last book drafted not long before his death, i this short but brilliant history of 20th century physics. But in this case its special meri derives from Snow's great authority and sure insight. It was a story so inti- mately familiar to him — not only the people involved but the significance of their work — that he wrote this book from memory. Familiar Tale The tale itself is familiar in a rough way to almost anyone who cares to inform himself about modern science — the story of how the atom (thought a century ago, to be the ultimate con- stituent of matter) was gradually dis sected. It was, in one of Snow's home ly but telling images, like the peeling of an onion, but also as if the first man to peel an onion had thought it a solid and layerless object. There was	t cists in the '30s already possessed the requisite theoretical knowledge, the development of the first atomic bom as a collaborative wartime project is the 1940s was a feat of "amateur eng neering," with scientists as the ann teurs. This book may not solve the enduring dilemma of secrecy. But it cast starting light on the inevitable differ- ences that divide statesmen and scien- tists, in wartime and today. After j became virtually certain that the Manhattan. Project would succeed Niels Bohr became obsessed with the view that the Russians should be in formed. This was many months be fore Potsdam. But he was, in this harshly (Snow says insensitively) and

It is a story that even scientific tyros may grasp, in some fashion, from any elementary text- book. But C.P. Snow was too imaginative, too astute in his observation of human types, to fail to see that even in this lofty enterprise the quirks of human nature would assert them- selves, Excellent as "The Physicists" is a resume and primer, it is even better as a portrait gallery of the figures who unraveled the atomic mystery. Snow knew most of them personally and his touches of portraiture are engaging.	In fact, most of the professional physicists working on the atomin weapon predicted, from their own in imate knowledge of the state of Sovi et science, that it would take about four years for the Russians to develop their own bomb. In this they were ap parently right, although, as Snow ac knowledges, the factor of espionage is imponderable. On Tampa Bay's final posession, Williams completed a 40-yard pass to Jimmie Giles. After moving to the Oakland 13-yard line, Tampa Bay stopped the clock with eight seconds remaining and called on Capece. Hendricks, the All-Pro linebacker, got a hand on the ball, slowing it down just enough that Capece's 30-yard attempt fell several yards short.

The Raiders broke a three-game losing streak in which they had failed to score a point.

NFL Raiders Reported to Have Developed Ties With Bookmakers, Gamblers Over Past Decade

By John M. Crewdson and Wendell Rawls Jr. New York Times Service

OAKLAND, Calif. — Over the past decade, in clear violation of National Football League rules, investigators. bookmakers and gamblers have established close ties with the Oakland Raiders, according to infor-mation gathered by California and federal law enforcement agencies. In one such instance, law-enforcement officers and NFL secur-ity agents failed to launch an investigation after a trainer for the Raiders was accused nine years ago by a police informant of betting heavily on NFL games and passing inside information about locker room. the team to his bookmaker. According to law-enforcement sources, the NFL's security department is conducting an investiga-tion of the possible links between the Raiders and gambling inter-ests, and information being devel-

Bamberger Named To Manage Mets

United Press International MONTREAL - George Bam-berger, forced to give up a manage-rial post with the Milwankee Brewers last year because of heart surgery, Monday agreed to man-age the New York Mets at an esti-age the New York Mcts at an esd-mated salary of $200,000. Bamberger, who had been the first choice of the Mcts' general manager, Frank Cashen, for the job after Joe Torre was fired, said he would accept the position in a phone conversation from his home in St. Petersburg, Fla. Official announcement of Bamberger's acceptance was expected to be made before the start of the World Series, which opens Tues-day night in New York.

The new disclosures come against the backdrop of the NFL's concern, made evident during an antitrust trial in Los Angeles last summer, about the continuing, decade-old business relationship between Al Davis, the Raiders' managing general partner, and Al-len Glick, the former Las Vegas casino owner whom the Justice Department has identified as a "a straw party" for organized crime interests in Chicago.

Wanted in Nevada

Tropiano's original allegations, law-enforcement officials said, were passed on to the FBI and to the NFL But although the FBI questioned Anderson, it never began a formal inquiry, and until last month, neither Tropiano nor Anderson was ever interviewed by NFL security.

In his statement to the district attorney and in a recent interview with The Times, Tropiano, who is still wanted in Nevada in connection with a 1973 credit-card fraud case, said he first became aware of Anderson's betting and other ac-tivities while working for Green in the early 1970s. He said that Anderson, using the code number "79," had placed numerous bets on professional football games, some-times betting up to $2,000 "four or five times a week."

Anderson, he said, also supplied Green with inside information about the physical condition of some of the Raiders players, of the sort that might result in a betting edge for gamblers. In his statement to the district attorney, Tropiano recalled that Anderson once "told us Lamonica [Daryle Lamonica, then the Raider quarterback] wasn't going to start. The paper said Lamonica was going to start.

1970s, Tropiano told the district attorney, Green received information from the operator of a Las Vegas sports betting parlor that the quarterback of the team opposing the Raiders the next Sunday had bet $25,000 on the Raiders, a 3-point underdog. "He said, "I don't want you gays to get hurt up there taking Raider money,' Tropiano recalled. The same week, he said, Anderson also bet $7,000 on the Raiders with Green. The

"That's a complete lie," Ander- son said. "I've never made any bets for anybody. I've oever made a bet on professional football with Whitey Green. ### Art Buchwald Diversified Broker

WASHINGTON - I went to see my broker, Durgin, Burgin & Black the other day. I had to wade through TV sets, refrigerators, automobile parts, tool chests and children's clothes.

What's going on?" I asked Durgin. Sears, Roebuck is buying Dean

Witter and going into the brokerage business. So we've decided to go into consumer No. retailing. No one wants to stay in his own racket any more."

"Do you have the floor space?" A I asked him.

Buchwald "We're taking over two more floors for our toy department and women's accessories. We are trying to get all the brokers in town to do the same thing. If Sears wants to play dirty pool, they've taken on the wrong people."

"I wish yon luck. Listen, I was thinking about buying 100 shares of Xerox. What do you think?" "How about four radial automobile tires? They're guaranteed for 10 years." "Durgin, I know you're mad at Sears, but I really didn't come in here to buy tires." Forgive me, I've just lost my

"Forgive me, I've just lost my cool. You say Xerox." "I was thinking of Xerox or maybe RCA. That stock, accord-ing to Forbes, is underpriced." "I like RCA. Let me show you one of their 25-inch television sets.

We're having a Founder's Day special on them this week. Sears can't match them for price." "I don't want a television set. I want to buy stocks."

Rome's Public Phones Mostly Out of Order

The Associated Press

 $\approx 1$

ROME - Two out of three public telephones in Rome are out of order, many broken by vandals and thieves, the oewspaper Il Gior-nale of Milan reported Monday. The newspaper said the state-run telephone company is not entirely to hlame; shopkeepers and barmen sometimes put "out-of-or-der" signs on their telephones to ensure a free incoming line at a rate much lower than that of a regular phone.

"Right you are. Let me get R('A up on the screen. Hey, look at this. You can get an electric chain saw and a pair of gloves for $89.95. It's going to be a cold winter, and you're really going to need a saw if you've got a fireplace."

"Durgin, I'm worried about Wall Street, Joseph Granville is a menace. He writes one letter and my entire stock portfolio goes out the window. How do I hedge against another Granville panic?" "You can hide in a freezer. Let me show you this latest GE mod-el."

"I can't buy stock and also buy freezers," I said. "We'll let you have the freezer on our lay-away plan. Once your stocks go up, we'll transfer the dividends to your freezer account. We're the only ones offering this. Sears, Roebuck isn't set up to do the paperwork." "You're really out to get them, aren't you?

"Why shouldn't we? They want to muscle into everything. First, it was insurance, then real estate, and now they want to sell stocks in their stores. I used to push Sears, Roebuck stocks, but oow when I get an order I recommend tax-free bonds instead. If Sears, Roebuck gets lucky, everyone will go in the brokerage business. You'll be able to go into Woolworth's and get all the IBM stock you want."

. . . "But there are still going to be #### some of us who will just want to deal with a stockbroker who will devote all his time to financial business " "You say that now. But I can just see you going into Sears for a mattress, and picking up a futures' contract in pork bellies, which they'll probably have a sale on to get you in the store."

"Can we get back to my port-folio? What are you people recom-mending in money funds?" "We have a wide selection. But if I were you, I'd take advantage of our Thanksgiving Day sale on vi-deo games. They're a lot more fun and unlike money funds your whole family can enjoy them." "Til be back, Durgin."

"You don't have to come in. Here's our new Christmas Re-tailer's Catalog. You can order anything you want on the phone. And our deliveries are faster than Sears."

Sophie Taeuber was born of a German father and a Swiss mother in Davos, Switzerland, in or Sha She was anything but an ideal-ogue or theoretician. Yet it would be a mistake to overlook 1889, and in the years 1908-10 she was enrolled as a student of the critical element in her work. textile design at the School of The impulse to unburden artistic expression of weighty precedents Applied Arts in Saint Gall. Be-tween 1911 and 1913 she divided and moribund conventions and place it at the service of pure feeling was central to everything that she aspired to in her art. So was the determination to create new pictorial disciplines that would lend themselves to this goal. It was in Zurich in 1915 that Sophie Tacuber met Jean Arp. Almost immediately they entered the capitals of the Enropean avant-garde during the war, and Sophie Taeuber-Arp, c. 1913.

both Sophie Taeuber and Jean Arp were very much a part of the Dada movement that flourished there. In addition to her work as an artist and teacher, Tacuber also won a considerable reputation as a dancer in this period. In the catalog accompanying this exhibition, Lanchner quotes from a memoir by another member of the Zurich Dada group, Emmy Ball-Hennings, who wrote: "She was studying dancing at the Ecole Laban ... I can still see Sophie Taeuber dancing at the Galerie Dada. There, several dancers who went on to become famous, such as Mary Wigman, showed us their talent. But none of them left us with such a vivid impression as Sophie Taeuber." This was at a time when modern dance was quite as avant-garde as abstract art, and from the point of view of . the School of Applied Arts in Znrich, even less respectable. Tacuber was thus obliged to use a pseudonym when she performed at the Dada sources.

The hallmark of Taenber-Arp's art, then and later, was an extreme simplicity of design most often achieved through the use of pure geometrical forms. So hackneyed have the conventions of geometrical abstraction since become that it nowadays requires a certain leap of the imagination to appreciate the intensity of effort that its first practitioners lavished on its realization. The whole artistic process, from their point of view, had to be stripped of its fictions and pretensions, of all its accumulated rhetoric and associations, if it were ever to be made new again. It had, in other words, to regain its innocence. It had, therefore, not only to reject the world of appearances but perhaps more importantly — the very methods that art had tradi-tionally employed to achieve its familiar effects. Arp has left us with a very moving account of how he and Tacuber set about this task of denuding the artistic process of its more cumbersome methods and associations. Speaking of the period 1916-18, he wrote: "So-phie Taeuber and I resolved never to use oil colors again. We wanted to discard any reminder of oil painting, which seemed to us to belong to an arrogant, pre-tentious world. . . During the years that we abstained from oil painting, we used in our works exclusively paper, cloth, embroidery, as spiritual exercises, as a discipline that allowed us to recapture painting in its original punity."

There is something very poig-cant about this studied effort to achieve a state of innocence, both in art and in life, at the very moment when the rest of Europe was embroiled in one of the bloodiest conflicts in its history. and I doubt if the inner life of this art can ever be fully understood without some sense of the historical conditions that engen-dered it. Hanging on the walls of the unuseum today, Tacuber's-Arp's abstractions - paintings, embroideries and pictorial constructions — are totally devoid, of course, of any references to the war, yet there is a sense in which they constituted an antiwar gesture, an avowal of inno-cence in the face of worldly evil and catastrophe.

Abstract art of this persuasion seems to need either an intense

Moved to France

The end of the war inevitably left Tacuber-Arp somewhat iso-lated in Zurich. The artists and writers who had gathered there to escape the war departed, and Arp, too, seems to have traveled about a good deal while Tacuber-Arp remained at her post at the School of Applied Arts. It was not until the late '20s when she was able to give up teaching and she and Arp settled in France, in a house that she designed for them at Mendon-Val Fleury, outside Paris, that her career re-perbly equipped to carry out the kind of large decorative commisgained its momentum In the late '20s she was com-missioned by the architect Paul Horn to design the interior of a sions that came to others after World War II, when abstract art achieved a much greater degree of popularity, but in the '30s no cafe and tearoom in Strasbourg -the Cafe de l'Aubette - and she further commissions of that sort invited Arp and Theo van Doescame her way. Even though he was being hon-ored by President Reagan, comedi-an Bob Hope still managed a few zingers for his host. "Mr. Reagan worked hard as an actor, a gover-nor and now a president." Hope said. "He worked his way up all because Nancy had this certain dish pattern that she wanted." Hope also told the black-tic audience of 800 in Washington that the president and first lady have dif-ferent political heroes: "Ronnie's terent poincal across: "Konne's is Calvin Coolidge and Nancy's is Calvin Klein." But Reagan got the heartiest laugh with the following one-liner: "I've been getting some flak about ordering production of the B-1," said the president, with a look of open-faced innocence. "How did I know it was an air plane? I thought it was vitaming for the troops." The dinner mised money to honor Hope's 40-year contribution to the United Service Organization and to help un-derwrite a Bob Hope USO World Headquarters in Washington.
